ABSTRACT

The Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS) requires that students demonstrate communication competency. It is up to the institution to demonstrate how these competencies are achieved. Broward Community College (Florida) chose to identify competencies using the National Communication Association (NCA) Sophomore Exit Level Speaking and Listening Competencies. These competencies had been developed by a task force and are available on the NCA Website. Advantages to using the NCA Competencies were that the credibility of the work had already been accomplished and it became easier to examine how these competencies would be met. At Broward two existing courses offered by the Communication Department addressed all of the speaking and listening competencies -- the Public Speaking course and the hybrid Introduction to Oral Communication course. Broward decided that all students attempting an Associate's Degree must include either of the two courses as part of their general education requirements. An alignment of the Speaking and Listening Competencies and the units of the Common Course Outline show how these courses fill the need of addressing student oral communication competence. This paper contains copies of: The NCA Sophomore Level Speaking and Listening Competencies; Broward Community College Hybrid Course Outline (SPC 1024) with course units and competencies addressed in each unit; and Broward Community College Public Speaking Outline (SPC 1600) with course units and competencies addressed in each unit. There are many times that defending the argument for inclusion of speech communication courses in the general education curriculum seems overwhelming. However, sometimes the ammunition needed to win the battle is already built into the system. The Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS) requires that students demonstrate communication competency. This is likely true for other accrediting agencies. It is up to the institution to demonstrate how those competencies are achieved. The institution can decide on the most effective way to address the competencies and that could include requiring an oral communication course.

Broward Community College (Florida) chose to identify competence using the NCA Sophomore Exit Level Speaking and Listening Competencies. These competencies had been developed by a task force and are available from NCA in Communication Is Life (Quianthy 1990) and on the NCA Website. Since these competencies had the endorsement of the national, professional association, reaching consensus on what needed to be part of the general education curriculum was simplified.

There were several advantages to using the NCA Competencies. First, was the credibility of the work that had already been accomplished. Second, it became easier to examine how these competencies would be met. Two existing courses offered by the Communication Department addressed all of the speaking and listening competencies. These were the Public Speaking course and the hybrid Introduction to Oral Communication course. Other existing options (e.g. English courses) did not meet all of the competencies. Broward made the decision that all students attempting an Associate's Degree, must include either of the two communication courses as part of their general education requirements.

An alignment of the Speaking and Listening Competencies and the units of the Common Course Outline show how these courses fill the need of addressing student oral communication competence. Once this was done it made the argument for an oral communication course to be part of the general education curriculum.

Following are copies of:

- 1. The NCA Sophomore Level Speaking & Listening Competencies
- 2. Broward Community College Hybrid Course Outline (SPC 1024) with course units and competencies addressed in each unit.
- 3. Broward Community College Public Speaking Outline (SPC 1600) with course units and competencies addressed in each unit.

SPEAKING AND LISTENING COMPETENCIES

The speaking and listening competencies in this chapter were approved by the governing body of the Speech Communication Association in 1985. Considered essential for successful communication, they should be achieved by the end of the sophomore year of college regardless of the student's individual career goal.

After each competency statement, specific behaviors are listed that a student should demonstrate in order to be considered "competent." This listing of behaviors is not intended to be inclusive of all potential communication skills that a student may be required to exhibit; nor is it meant to be prescriptive in defining course content. These are the skills that are considered essential for successful communication.

Strategies for teaching these skills and for assessing student performance are contained in the chapters that follow.

SPEAKING COMPETENCIES

Speaking is the process of transmitting ideas and information orally in a variety of situations. Effective oral communication involves generating messages and delivering them in Standard American English with attention to vocal variety, articulation, and nonverbal signals.

In order to be a COMPETENT SPEAKER, a person must be able to compose a message and provide ideas and information suitable to the topic, purpose, and audience. Specifically, the competent speaker should exhibit the following competencies by demonstrating the abilities included under each statement.

DETERMINE THE PURPOSE OF ORAL DISCOURSE.

- 1. Identify the various purposes for discourse.
- 2. identify the similarities and differences among various purposes.
- 3. Understand that different contexts require differing purposes.
- 4. Generate a specific purpose relevant to the context when given a general purpose.

CHOOSE A TOPIC AND RESTRICT IT ACCORDING TO THE PURPOSE AND THE AUDIENCE.

- 1. Identify a subject that is relevant to the speaker's role, knowledge, concerns, and interests.
- 2. Narrow the topic adapting it to the purpose and time constraints for communicating.
- 3. Adapt the treatment of the topic to the context for communication.

FULFILL THE PURPOSE OF ORAL DISCOURSE BY:

FORMULATING A THESIS STATEMENT.

- 3. Use word choice in order to express ideas clearly, to create and maintain interest, and to enhance the speaker's credibility.
- 4. Select words that avoid sexism, racism, and other forms of prejudice.

PROVIDING EFFECTIVE TRANSITIONS.

- 1. Demonstrate understanding of the types and functions of transitions.
 - 2. Use transitions to:
 - a. establish connectedness

- b. signal movement from one idea to another
- c. clarify relationships among ideas

DEMONSTRATING SUITABLE INTERPERSONAL SKILLS.

- 1. Demonstrate appropriate interpersonal skills for various contexts.
- 2. Display self-awareness as a communicator.
- 3. Select from a repertoire of interpersonal skills those strategies that enhance relationships.
- 4. Use a conversational mode through self-presentation and response to feedback .

The COMPETENT SPEAKER must also be able to transmit the message by using delivery skills suitable to the topic, purpose, and audience. Specifically, the competent speaker should exhibit the following competencies by demonstrating the abilities included under each statement.

EMPLOY VOCAL VARIETY IN RATE, PITCH, AND INTENSITY.

- 1. Use vocal variety to heighten and maintain interest.
- 2. Use a rate that is suitable to the message, occasion, and receiver.

 - 2. Use the sounds of the American English language.

EMPLOY THE LEVEL OF AMERICAN ENGLISH APPROPRIATE TO THE DESIGNATED AUDIENCE.

- 1. Employ the level of American English that enhances the speaker's credibility, promotes the purpose, and the receiver's understanding.

shared.

- 3. Use standard pronunciation.
- 4. Use standard grammar.
