ABSTRACT

This resource guide aims to assist local Texas family literacy projects in acquiring resources to better serve their clients in the areas of adult literacy education, early childhood education, parent education, and learning disabilities. Funding resources--corporate and foundation-- are listed. Each area is approached from national, state, and local levels. Section 1 contains resources provided at the national level and further categorized under resources for multiple activities, adult education, early childhood education, parent education, learning disabilities, and corporations and foundations. National resource providers serving more than one category are listed separately as resources for multiple activities. Organizations are presented in charts with this information: name; address; web site address or telephone number; and resource outline. Although foundations and corporations are national in scope, wherever possible, their Texas addresses are incorporated. Section 2 identifies state agencies and regional educational service centers and resources/services they provide; web sites are included for adult literacy education, early childhood education, and parenting and family literacy. Section 3 lists local organizations/agencies and possible resources for adult education; early childhood education; and parenting education. Other community resources that are possible partners are listed. A final list identifies community foundations located in Texas; address and telephone number or web site address; and brief summary. FOREWORD

This Resource Guide has been developed in collaboration with personnel at the Texas Education Agency's (TEA) Division of Adult and Continuing Education and Even Start Program coordinators in Texas. This guide primarily aims to assist local family literacy projects in acquiring resources to better serve their clients. We have included resources for each of the following components of Family Literacy: Adult Literacy Education, Early Childhood Education, and Parent Education. Resources for Learning Disabilities are included as well. Funding resources such as Corporations and Foundations are also listed. Each of these areas is approached from National, State and Local levels.

One goal of this project is to create a network of collaborators to share information and expertise for effective functioning of family literacy programs. An added benefit of this activity has been in the determination and classification of family program components of successful literacy programs at the local level. This Resource Guide will help local programs locate common resources and contact agencies. These family literacy resource providers will assist people to enrich their literacy efforts for the present and the future. Newly established programs may find the resource guide particularly useful in identifying external resources.

The success of this document lies in its ability to be 'user-friendly' in terms of providing timely and up-to-date resources. Agencies and organizations "come and go" as collaborators with family literacy programs, especially at the local level. Therefore, the continual updating of the document will be necessary to keep it useful and effective.

READERS, PLEASE NOTE: This is a "working document." We can make this document more comprehensive by mutually sharing resources, information and knowledge. If you wish to add any more program services, organizations or community agencies to those that have been identified here – or provide updates and corrections to those currently listed - please contact us at:

RESOURCES THAT ARE NATIONAL IN SCOPE

The resources provided at the national level have been further categorized under:

- Resources for Multiple Activities
- Resources for Adult Education
- Resources for Early Childhood Education
- Resources for Parent Education
- Resources for Learning Disabilities
- Corporations and Foundations

Some of the National Level resource providers serve more than one of the categories mentioned above. These resource providers have been separately listed as Resources for Multiple Activities, and they form the first section of the resource guide. Those national resource providers that have specific areas of interest, e.g., Adult Education or Early Childhood Education, have been listed separately under those headings. For the purposes of this document, Adult Education Resources are those that support the literacy and educational needs of the parents; Early Childhood Resources are those that support the developmental and learning needs of children; and Parent Education Resources are those that support parenting and coping needs. Learning Disabilities Resources are those that support key elements needed for a successful program for people with learning disabilities. Finally, a list of Corporations and Foundations that are national in scope that may provide resources has been included. Although the Foundations and Corporations listed are national in scope, wherever possible, we have incorporated their Texas addresses.

Accessing the Resources. Most of these resources have Web site addresses that will help in accessing information. For those resources where Web site addresses could not be found, mailing addresses or telephone numbers have been provided.
