COUNCIL for OPPORTUNITY in EDUCATION

Established in 1981, the Council for Opportunity in Education is a non-profit organization dedicated to expanding educational opportunity throughout the U.S., the Caribbean, and the Pacific Islands. Through its numerous membership services, the Council works in conjunction with colleges, universities, and agencies that host federally funded college access programs to specifically help low-income, first-generation, and disabled Americans enter college and graduate.

The mission of the Council is to advance and defend the ideal of equal educational opportunity in postsecondary education. Through advocacy, professional development, and research, the Council works to assure that the least advantaged segments of the American population have a realistic chance to enter and graduate from a postsecondary institution.

WELCOME!

NOVEMBER 2007

DEAR STUDENTS, PARENTS, AND FRIENDS

You know the facts: it takes a lot of money to pay for a college education! These days students and families are struggling to meet the cost of tuition, room and board, and books, but you know it's worth it, because without a college degree, your future is not as bright. But the question is how can you pay for it without breaking the family bank? Scholarships, that's how!

In addition to financial aid awarded by federal and state government agencies, there are numerous scholarships that colleges and universities, business corporations, private foundations, and community organizations are offering right now for high school students going on to college, undergraduate students currently enrolled, and even graduate students pursuing education beyond a bachelor's degree. The money is out there, but how do you find it?

The Pell Institute, along with The Sallie Mae Fund and BET Networks, is pleased to present this scholarship guide for African-American students as one way to make your scholarship search a little easier. Inside this guide, you will find information about scholarships that are designed to reduce the cost of college for African-American students, and for all students of color.

Along with the who's, what's, and how's for applying for scholarships, this guide also contains information to connect you to sites where you can download online applications (where available) and details to contact the sponsoring organizations both in person and online. You can also access the online version of this scholarship guide at www.blackcollegedollars.org, which allows you to search for scholarships based on your interests and abilities.

We hope that you find this scholarship guide helpful as you navigate your way through paying for college! Good luck – now get started!

Sincerely,

Colleen T. O'Brien,
Director, THE PELL INSTITUTE for the Study of Opportunity in Higher Education

FINDING DOLLARS FOR COLLEGE

BEFORE YOU BEGIN TO LOOK THROUGH THE SCHOLARSHIPS IN THIS GUIDE, THERE ARE A FEW THINGS YOU NEED TO KNOW.

1) WHY SCHOLARSHIPS?

All students should apply for as much scholarship and grant aid as possible. Why? Because you don't have to pay them back. This money is made available to help students who meet specific qualifications pay for college. Once you apply for and receive the scholarship money, you can use it to pay for the costs you face, such as tuition and fees, room and board, books, or other college-related expenses. In limited cases, some scholarship providers ask recipients to participate in community service or volunteer activities, or to work in certain jobs or areas for a limited time in exchange for the financial support.

2) HOW DO I APPLY FOR SCHOLARSHIPS?

As you will see in reading through this guide, each scholarship provider may have their own process for students to apply and determine eligibility. Generally speaking, though, you may be asked to download an application and mail it in, along with the required materials, or you may have to contact the organization to obtain a hard copy of the application. In some cases, teachers, faculty members, or members of your community may have to nominate you, meaning you will need to obtain nomination forms or other materials to start the process of being considered for the scholarship.

While the requirements can vary, there is some general information that scholarship providers frequently request. To save time, gather the following before you begin filling out applications: resume; personal statements and/or essays; letters of reference/recommendation (from teachers, faculty, or other appropriate individuals); transcripts; GPA; writing samples; other samples of your work, such as art or media pieces; financial information, including the FAFSA (see below); parental/student income tax forms; and letters verifying enrollment, financial need, or receipt of financial aid. While you may be asked to customize some of this information for specific scholarships, starting with the basics will make the process go more smoothly from the start.

3) WHAT IS THE FAFSA?

If you are a student who is entering college next year, you need to complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). This form is used by the federal government to determine your eligibility for federal aid, such as grants and student loans. State agencies, colleges and universities, and many scholarship providers also use the FAFSA to assess financial need for students and their families.

This form is available in January of each year. Using your own financial information, as well as your parents' information, fill it out as soon as possible as many aid dollars are awarded on a first-come, first-served basis. Once you have completed and submitted the form, you will receive a Student Aid Report (SAR), which shows you how much money your family is expected to contribute towards your education for the coming year. With this information, colleges and scholarship providers are able to understand the amount of financial aid you will need to pay for your education.

If you are already enrolled in college, don't forget that you have to renew your FAFSA every January to be eligible for aid the next school year.

4) HOW DO I KNOW IF SCHOLARSHIP OFFERS ARE LEGITIMATE?

One practical rule to follow is that if it costs money, beware! Across the Internet scholarship search tools and materials are available free of charge. If a website, an organization, or an individual asks you to pay a fee to look for scholarships, better safe than sorry—stay clear and use the free search tools and materials. In addition, be careful about scholarships that require an application fee. While some legitimate scholarships may do so, most do not, so check with college counselors, financial aid offices, and other advisors before submitting payments or financial information to anyone. You can also use online sources, such as www.finaid.org, to find out more about potential scholarship scams.

5) WHERE CAN I GET MORE INFORMATION?

The U.S. Department of Education has several online sites, including Student Aid on the Web (<http://studentaid.ed.gov/PORTALSWebApp/students/english/index.jsp>), which can help you plan for college and understand more about the student aid process. The FAFSA can also be filled out online, starting at <http://www.fafsa.ed.gov/>, which will walk you through the process of completing and submitting the FAFSA. In addition, the Department of Education also provides free publications, including a guide to student financial aid. You can order online, or by calling 1-800-4FED-AID (1-800-433-3243).

The Sallie Mae Fund website also includes more free resources you can use to help plan and pay for college. You can download the information at www.salliemafund.org.

ABOUT THIS DIRECTORY

The organizations and the scholarships that were selected for inclusion in this guide were identified by the Pell Institute (with assistance from other financial aid professionals) as aid awards that are specifically targeted for African-American students. The guide also includes scholarships and awards that are intended for all students of color.

In addition, selected scholarships were included based on several key criteria:

- scholarship award amounts of $500 or greater;
- eligibility not limited to one scholarship for one student from a given school or area to attend only one institution; and
- availability of up-to-date information including submission deadlines.

With the increased use of the Internet, more providers are making applications available online, and this guide contains these links when possible. Two considerations, though, in terms of using the online applications:

- 1) many organizations may not post the current application until a specific date in relation to the application deadline. Be sure to check the websites of scholarships that you are interested in periodically, particularly as the application deadline gets closer.
- 2) check the date / year of the application carefully—in some cases, you may be able to access the application, but it may be the previous year's form. While this may help you know what type of information the organization requires, the application may change from year to year. When in doubt, contact the sponsoring organization for the most up-to-date information.

The United Negro College Fund (UNCF) is an important scholarship resource for African-American students. In addition to sponsoring several scholarships, UNCF administers many more scholarships for corporations and individuals who want to help African-American students participate and succeed in college. You will notice as you read through this guide that UNCF is frequently listed as the contact source. For some of the scholarships, students are able to apply online using a common application via the UNCF website, www.uncf.org/forstudents/scholarship.asp. You can also access specific applications as required by some scholarship providers. The UNCF scholarship website is a good source of information for these and other scholarships. Furthermore, if you are interested in or are attending a UNCF member institution (see the list on the following page), you should also talk to the financial aid office at the college about specific scholarships offered by the institution in partnership with UNCF.

As noted above, there were criteria that limited the selection of scholarships included in this guide. Therefore, there are some existing scholarships not included in this guide for which you may be eligible for. So, while you use this publication or the online site as the starting point for your search, don't be afraid to look for more. Organizational websites such as UNCF, The Sallie Mae Fund (www.thesalliemaefund.org/smfnew/sections/search.html), and Fast Web (www.fastweb.com) can provide more information about the search process and actual search tools.

Eligibility for some scholarships included in this guide are restricted to UNCF member institutions, and/or in some cases, all Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs). The following list will help you identify these institutions:
