Introduction

Californians can earn college degrees or certificates or get job-related training at a variety of institutions both public and private, throughout the state.

The variety of institutions, programs, degrees and other educational choices is wide. This Guide will help you identify options that suit your needs.

Please keep in mind that inclusion of an institution in this Guide does not imply an endorsement of its courses, degrees or educational outcomes.

Some important facts about going to college

It is never too soon or too late to benefit from college or education beyond high school. Younger students and their families should start planning as soon as possible. Saving for college should start when a child is born, and building a good academic record becomes increasingly important as students enter middle and high school. Returning or adult students also need to look at every option. Here are some facts to consider:

- Entrance requirements and deadlines All institutions have application deadlines and many have very specific general entrance requirements, including completion of certain courses and tests. Some have residency requirements. Find out now what these requirements are for all schools under consideration. Check with counselors and the institutions you want to attend. This Guide lists addresses, phone numbers, and websites for institutions across the state.
- Higher Education costs and financial aid— The cost of education beyond high school varies widely, depending on factors like the course of study, institution selected, and the educational objective. Saving to pay for college is important, but financial aid is available to many California students. Aid may come directly from the school or college, the state, or the federal government.

Find out if you qualify for financial assistance. See a counselor. Ask for more information about aid from the institutions you are considering attending. More information is available in this Guide and from:

Residency Requirements

California's public colleges and universities distinguish between residents and nonresidents for tuition purposes. State residents historically have been charged fees but not tuition. Nonresident students, however, pay both fees and tuition.

The California Community Colleges (CCC) and the California State University (CSU) apply rules set by State statute in determining students' residency status for tuition purposes, while the University of California (UC) has developed a separate and stricter set of residency rules.

It is important to remember that because changes may be made at any time, and there are exceptions to rules, you should always check with the campus you are considering.

How To Get Facts About Your Residency

A student's residence is determined at the campus level. Therefore, campus officials can give you the most accurate advice on residence issues. If you have specific questions about your residency status, please read the statements of resiagency requirements published in the catalog of the public institution you plan to attend or contact the official who has been designated to make residency determinations for that institution.

- For residency information at a community college campus, contact the Admission's Officer of the campus.
- For residency information at a state university, contact the campus Residence Clerk in the Admissions Office.
- For residency information at a university campus, contact the Residence Deputy or Residence Affairs Officer who is located in the campus Registrar's Office.

Such individuals can give you more accurate advice and also provide more precise information than anyone else.

Accreditation

Accrediting agencies are private educational associations of regional or national scope that develop criteria and conduct peer evaluations to assess whether or not those criteria are met. Institutions or programs that meet an agency's criteria are thereby "accredited."

Accreditation does not provide automatic acceptance by one institution of credit earned at another institution, nor does it give assurance of acceptance of graduates by employers. Acceptance of students or graduates is always the prerogative of the receiving institution or employer.

For these reasons, besides ascertaining the accredited status of a school or program, students should take additional measures to determine, prior to enrollment, whether or not their educational goals will be met through attendance at a particular institution. These measures should include inquiries to institutions to which transfer might be desired, or to prospective employers and, if possible, personal inspection of the institution at which enrollment is contemplated.

To ensure a basic level of quality, accrediting associations of regional or national scope have adopted criteria reflecting the qualities of a sound educational program and have developed procedures for evaluating institutions or programs to determine whether or not they are operating at basic levels of quality.

Types of accreditation

The two basic types of educational accreditation are: 1) institutional, and 2) specialized or programmatic.

Institutional accreditation applies to an entire institution, indicating that each of its parts is contributing to the achievement of the institution's objectives, although not necessarily all at the same level of quality. The various commissions of the regional accrediting associations, for example, perform institutional accreditation, as do many national accrediting agencies.

Specialized or programmatic accreditation applies to programs, departments, or schools that are parts of an institution.

Most of the specialized or programmatic accrediting agencies review units within an institution of higher education that is accredited by one of the regional accrediting commissions. However, certain accrediting agencies also accredit professional schools and other specialized or vocational institutions of higher education that are freestanding in their operations.

How to use the Guide to California Colleges and Universities

This guide is divided into three parts designed for locating information about higher education in a number of ways.

Part I --- In this section you can look up the name of the campus you are considering attending.

All of California's degree-granting colleges and universities are described and listed in alphabetical order under the following six categories:

- 1. California Community Colleges — open-access public institutions that offer two-year academic degrees, vocational training, and adult education. (Page 9)
- 2. The California State University — public university campuses that award bachelor's, master's and education doctoral degrees, plus joint doctoral with other universities. (Page 13)
- 3. University of California — public university campuses that offer bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees. (Page 55)
- 4. Other Public Institutions — Hastings College of the Law and the Naval Postgraduate School, public institutions that have their own governing body and that are supported with funding appropriated by either the State or federal government. (Page 61)
- 5. Independent Colleges and Universities — non-State-supported institutions that are accredited by the Western Association of Schools and Colleges. (Page 63)
- 6. Private State-Approved and Exempt Institutions — schools, colleges, and universities approved by the California Department of Consumer Affairs, Bureau for Private Postsecondary and Vocational Education (BPPVE) — the State agency that approves private institutions not accredited by WASC. (Page 105)

Part II — This section contains specific programs — such as Journalism or Computer Engineering. Institutions that offer each program are listed under that heading.

Part III — The last portion of this Guide is an index. Use this section to locate schools, programs, towns with campuses, military bases with off-campus centers, and virtually any other topic covered in this Guide.

The institutions or their central offices provided much of the information for this Guide. Other data came from various accrediting agencies and other sources. Reproduction of that information here does not constitute or imply a Commission endorsement. Prospective students should thoroughly research all options before selecting any educational course, institution, or program.

California Community Colleges

Many educational options are offered by the California Community Colleges, including academic and vocational training programs that lead to occupational certificates, Associate of Arts or Science degrees, and transfer programs.

There are 109 community colleges and many off-campus centers that are administered by 71 districts located throughout the state. These campuses serve more than 2.5 million students every year.

Community college campuses are designed and intended to be close to the state's primary residential centers and within easy driving distance for most students. A California resident may attend any community college campus in the state.

Community college students can complete the first two years of a university education and, if they meet certain requirements, can transfer to the California State University, the University of California, or an independent institution to complete a four-year (bachelor) degree.

The community colleges also offer remedial instruction in conjunction with local school districts, instruction in English as a second language, adult non-credit instruction, and support services to help students succeed at the postsecondary level.

Admission, residency requirements

By law, the California Community Colleges are required to admit any California resident who graduated from high school, and may admit those who have not graduated but are over 18 years of age and can benefit from the instruction offered.

The community colleges may also admit any nonresident possessing a high school diploma or the equivalent. More information about residency requirements for fee and tuition purposes can be found in this Guide on page 5.

Fees and cost of attendance

As of the 2007 spring term, the fee for California residents will be $600 for a full-time student; non-residents will pay $4809. Additional information can be found at: www.cccco.edu/faq

Housing

Eleven community colleges have on-campus dormitory facilities:

- College of the Redwoods
- College of the Siskiyous
- Columbia College
- Lassen College
- Reedley College
- Santa Rosa Junior College
- Shasta College

- Sierra College
- Taft College
- West Hills College
- Yuba College

Governance and Administration

The 16-member Board of Governors of the California Community Colleges is responsible for setting policy and providing guidance for the districts and colleges in the system. The Board is appointed by the governor and selects a Chancellor as chief systemwide executive officer.

Each of the 71 community college districts in the state has a locally-elected Board of Trustees, responsive to local community needs and charged with the operations of the local college(s). The source of the information on this page is the California Community Colleges Chancellor's Office.

Vista Community College in Berkeley is part of the Peralta Community College District. It offers university transfer, occupational education, and basic skills programs in a unique set of special schedules and programs designed to maximize student access.

Vista holds classes at its site, on the UC Berkeley campus, and at selected community locations. An Afternoon College and an Evening College provide a non-conflicting, two-year schedule for students to complete most transferable, associate-degree programs offered at the college, and PACE allows working adults to complete an articulated, transferable liberal arts associate degree in two and one-half years.

Vista's advanced computer center offers an applied computer information systems major, Novell network training, and a variety of current business software applications, including desktop publishing. Other occupational programs include American Sign Language, business administration, office technology, international trade, and travel. The Vista biotechnology technician program offers a strong Contract Education Program, and its centers for international trade development and small business development provide a one-stop resource for Alameda County businesses and entrepreneurs. Career, transfer, academic, and financial aid counseling are available.

Disability Services: Disability-related services are identified by both student and counselor and are provided on an individual basis. Services may include registration assistance, interpreters, readers and special testing arrangements. Special equipment and taped texts also are available. For more information: (510) 981-2812

Long Beach City College offers a comprehensive instructional program. Transfer, occupational, and community service programs serve the needs of a large and diverse student population. Small classes and support services, such as counseling, financial aid, and tutoring, demonstrate its commitment to helping its students attain success. Known for its commercial music and electronics programs, the college has formed growing relationships with Nissan, Caterpillar, and other corporations and has been named a model for its nursing and child-care programs. The college's two campuses are situated on more than 140 acres.

Disability Services: The Department of Disabled Students Programs and Services provides assistance to disabled students requiring special services at the college. A Special Learning Center for disabled students provides self-pacing programs and vocational exploration packages. In addition, the program has as its goal the integration of the student with a disability into the mainstream of college activities. For more information: (562) 938-4558

Established in 1929

Located just over a mile from the Pacific Ocean, Santa Monica College is a leader in transferring students to the University of California and the California State University. The college offers instruction in academic, professional, and vocational fields. Qualified students are given an opportunity to join a Scholars Program if they plan to transfer to universities such as UCLA or USC, and qualified professional and performing arts students may join a Professional Arts Mentor Program.

Disability Services: Santa Monica College makes every effort to make its campus fully accessible to students with disabilities. The College's Center for Students with Disabilities offers guidance and counseling on admissions requirements and procedures, as well as a number of special programs to help students with their academic, vocational, and career planning goals. Established in 1918

Located some 50 miles north of San Francisco, Santa Rosa Junior College has grown into one of the largest single college districts in the country: the Sonoma County Junior College District. Offering a comprehensive educational program in both general and vocational education, the college attracts more students each semester. Classes are offered at a variety of locations throughout Sonoma County including the Santa Rosa Campus, located on 100+ acres in the heart of Santa Rosa, the Petaluma Campus, a 365-acre self-sustaining college farm, the Coddington Center, and a regional criminal justice training center. In addition to these educational facilities, the college is also home to a planetarium, an art gallery, the Jesse Peter Multicultural Museum, and the nationally recognized Summer Repertory Theatre.

Disability Services: It is the policy of the Sonoma County Junior College District to provide equal educational opportunities for students with disabilities in accordance with state and federal law and regulations including the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990, Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, and Title 5 of the California Administrative Code. California State University

The California State University (CSU) system includes 23 campuses across the state. These multipurpose institutions serve more than 400,000 students annually and offer both undergraduate and graduate instruction in a variety of professional and occupational fields as well as broad liberal education. Admission priority is given to students who have successfully completed their first two years at a California Community College campus.

Each State University campus retains its own unique academic and demographic character. These campuses include both comprehensive and polytechnic universities, as well as the California Maritime Academy, a specialized campus.

The primary focus of the CSU faculty is providing quality instruction. CSU campuses require for graduation a basic program of “General Education-Breadth Requirements” regardless of the type of bachelor’s degree or major field selected by the student.

Admission requirements

The CSU requires students to complete a specified number of academic courses in high school, called the “a-g” subjects (college preparatory courses) and earn a C or better in those courses. If a student has below a 3.0 grade point average, the university then uses a numerical index, consisting of standardized test scores and grades in the required courses to determine a student’s eligibility for the CSU system. The university uses this model to ensure that access is offered to the top one third of California high school graduates as designated in the state Master Plan for Higher Education.

To transfer to the university from a community college, a student must have a grade point average of 2.0 or higher in all transferable units and be in good standing at his or her last school. Depending on a number of factors, other requirements may apply. Check with the admissions office at the campus you are planning to attend.

CSU provides an on-line information and application system at www.csumentor.edu. It includes information about admission, academic requirements, fees and tuition, financial aid and other topics. Residency requirements for tuition purposes can be found on page 5.

Cost of attendance

Several factors, including system-wide fees, location of campus, and living arrangements determine the total cost of attendance. Up-to-date information on student fees and living expenses can be found at www.calstate.edu.

Governance and administration

Responsibility for the California State University is vested in the Board of Trustees. There are 25 members with 24 appointed by the governor and one appointed by the CSU Statewide Alumni Council. The Trustees appoint the Chancellor, who is the chief executive officer of the system, and the presidents, who are the chief executive officers of the respective campuses.

The trustees, the chancellor and the presidents develop system-wide policy. Campus-level implementation is done via broadly based consultative procedures.

The Academic Senate of the California State University, made up of elected representatives of the faculty from each campus, recommends academic policy to the Board of Trustees through the Chancellor.

Established in 1929

The California Maritime Academy became the 22nd campus of the California State University in 1995. It is located on a 67-acre campus in Vallejo on the shore of the Carquinez Strait and San Pablo Bay. It offers its students a four-year program preparing them to become licensed officers for the United States Merchant Marine and the California maritime industry, while training those interested for commissioning as Naval Reserve officers.

Maritime Academy students who wish to be licensed as deck officers may major in marine transportation or business administration, while those who wish to be licensed as engineering officers may major in engineering technology or mechanical engineering.

The academy's major training ship, Golden Bear, serves as a "floating laboratory" for students, particularly during their annual training cruises.

Disability Services: California Maritime Academy maintains a Disability Resource Office manned by a Director of Services to Students with Disabilities. Through this office students with disabilities can access counseling, registration assistance, adaptive technology, extended test time, and other reasonable academic accommodations. Established in 1901

The CSU campus midway between Los Angeles and San Francisco, and 10 miles from the Pacific Ocean, is often called "Cal Poly." It emphasizes a practical, hands-on, "learning-by-doing" approach to education. It is known for its professional programs in agriculture, architecture, business, computer science, engineering, graphic communication, and science. It also offers programs in teacher education, liberal arts, and other professions. Its small classes allow students individual attention from its teaching-oriented faculty.

Cal Poly emphasizes teaching students to think logically, evaluate critically, and communicate clearly. Instruction incorporates the ideals of good work ethic, honesty, and the acceptance of individual differences. It promotes an effective education that will instill an appreciation for life-long learning, and is committed to excellence.

Cal Poly undergraduate students identify with their major from the beginning. Students select majors at the time they apply and they take courses in their major starting in their first year.

Disability Services: The Disability Resource Center (DRC) provides information and assistance to students who have permanent or temporary disabilities. Established in 1994

Alongside historic Monterey Bay on California's central coast, California State University, Monterey Bay sits atop 1,365 acres of what was once the U.S. Army's Fort Ord. It has 100 full-time faculty members.
Students pursue their educational interests on a modern, technology-driven campus.
Since the university was founded in 1994 as the 21st campus of the CSU system, each currently used campus building has been completely renovated. This includes housing for the large percentage of students living on campus.

The Campus teaches through service to the community. The Campus Service Learning requirement has become a model for others.

The Campus seeks a global perspective; all fields of study are viewed through a worldwide lens, and all students learn a second language.

The Campus interconnects several fields of study. It offers multiple-focus undergraduate majors, teacher certification, and graduate programs. Each integrates several traditional fields of study.

Students design Individualized Learning Plans that may combine courses, field study, internships, and verified learning from past experiences. Prior to graduation, students must demonstrate their cumulative learning through a Senior Capstone project.

Disability Services: As a model, pluralistic, academic community, CSUMB supports the full integration of diverse segments of the campus community into campus life.

Disabled students will find faculty and staff throughout campus who may assist them.

California State University, Stanislaus, serves students from throughout the region, California, the U.S. and other nations. Students pursue a variety of general academic, pre-professional, applied, and credential programs at the undergraduate and graduate levels in business, arts, letters, sciences, and education. It provides small classes and an accessible, teaching-oriented faculty that fosters creativity and excellence in the educational process. Its commitment to service in its 10,000 square mile Central Valley service area is evidenced by outreach efforts that include an Instructional Television Network and the Stockton Center, which offers upper-division courses to students in San Joaquin County.

Disability Services: The Disabled Student Services Office tests students who think that they have learning disabilities. It provides individualized support services for students with disabilities, including assistance with registration, orientation to campus, tutors and note takers, reader services, interpreters, campus shuttle service, designated parking, testing accommodations, and liaison with faculty, University offices, and off-campus agencies. San Diego State University is the oldest and largest higher education institution in the San Diego area and is among the top 20 largest universities in the nation.

It has evolved into a major comprehensive university. It offers bachelor's, master's, and doctoral degrees in liberal arts, sciences, and professionally oriented degrees such as business administration, communicative disorders, education, fine arts, and nursing. It is one of the most affordable comprehensive universities in the nation.

Students from all levels benefit from working alongside faculty as they conduct scholarly research and community service in their disciplines.

A variety of special programs are offered to help new freshmen and transfer students achieve both academic and personal success. The Imperial Valley Campus at Calexico offers upper-division, teacher credential, and graduate-level courses.

San Jose State University is a regional comprehensive institution serving a diverse student body of graduate and undergraduate students. It has continually advanced to fill the region's educational, cultural, social, technological and business needs. It emphasizes applied as well as traditional learning - combining practical experience with classroom instruction and building on a strong liberal arts foundation.

Students and faculty are involved in academic, applied, and creative research as well as internships and projects. Its links with business, industry, cultural organizations, and government agencies in Silicon Valley and throughout the world create direct benefits to employers, students, and faculty. Its accessibility to area business and industry attracts large numbers of reentry students and professionals in addition to the traditional base of first-time freshmen and community college transfers.

University of California

The University of California (UC) consists of ten general campuses, one health science campus, and numerous special research facilities.

UC serves more than 208,000 students annually, offering broad undergraduate curricula leading to the baccalaureate degree at each general campus. It also awards master's, doctoral, and professional degrees.

In addition to its role as a research institution, UC manages three U.S. Department of Energy national laboratories and five medical centers.

Hastings College of the Law (www.uchastings.edu) in San Francisco is affiliated with the UC system but is administered independently and has its own governing board.

Admission requirements

UC requires students to complete a specified number of academic courses in high school, called the “a-g” subjects. The university then uses a numerical index, consisting of standardized test scores and grades in these UC required courses, to determine a student’s eligibility for the UC system. The university uses this eligibility model to ensure that access is offered to the top 12.5 percent of California high school graduates as designated in the state Master Plan for Higher Education.

The Eligibility in the Local Context (ELC) program is an additional route to achieving eligibility for admission. It grants UC eligibility to the top 4.0 percent of students in each California high school, based on their grades in UC-required courses. UC makes this determination based on the evaluation of student transcripts forwarded to UC by individual high schools. Details about the ELC program are available at: www.ucop.edu/sas/elc/.

Freshman students will meet the minimum requirement if they have a grade-point average of 3.0 or higher plus an adequate score on the ACT or SAT I and SAT II subject tests.

Admission priority is given to California residents. Every qualified student who is a resident of California is entitled to admission at one of the University’s campuses, although not necessarily at the campus of first choice.

More information on UC admissions, including high school “a-g” certified course lists and community college courses approved for transfer to UC, can be obtained at: www.ucop.edu/pathways.

Costs of attendance

Several factors, including system-wide fees, location of campus, and living arrangements determine the total cost of attendance. Up-to-date information on student fees and living expenses can be found at www.universityofcalifornia.edu/admissions/payingforuc/costs.html.

Governance and administration

The University of California is governed by a Board of Regents. This 26-member board has 18 members appointed by the governor, one student appointed by the Regents, and seven ex-officio members. The regents select the University president. Educational policy is established by the Academic Senate on behalf of the faculty. The University’s administrative headquarters are located in Oakland:

UC Berkeley is rated highly by the American Council on Education. The Berkeley faculty, which includes eight Nobel Prize winners, 15 National Medal of Science honorees, and 11 MacArthur Fellows, leads the nation in several categories, including Guggenheim Fellowships and National Science Foundation Young Investigator Awards. The Pacific Film Archive, an international scholarship resource, and the University Art Museum, which regularly mounts some of the nation's most compelling exhibits, are among the campus' attractions.

Disability Services: The Disabled Students Program (DSP) is located at 230 Cesar Chavez Student Center. UC Davis is known for its strong commitment to teaching, with nearly a dozen highly rated undergraduate programs and a botany department ranked at the top. It is a leader in the fields of biological sciences and agriculture and is among the nation's top 20 universities in research funding.

The campus has made contributions in a variety of fields. Its viticulture and enology department, for example, has influenced winemakers around the world, while its studio art program is regarded as one of the best in the country. The campus is one of seven national centers for AIDS research, combining the skills of medical, biomedical and veterinary scientists. Davis offers undergraduate majors and graduate programs in three colleges and professional schools for medicine, veterinary medicine, law, and management.

UC Irvine is regarded as one of the top public universities in the country. Students may select from undergraduate majors and graduate programs.

Located 40 miles south of Los Angeles, the campus comprises 1,500 acres of coastal foothills in Orange County, a center for business and high-tech industries such as biomedicine, computer software, and electronic components. Numerous internship and job opportunities are available to students.

UCI has developed programs that combine studies such as art and technology, medicine and engineering, ecology and the social sciences, and business and computer sciences, all designed to prepare students for roles as citizens and scholars in the new century. Its research strengths are numerous and varied.

About one-third of the student body lives on campus in a variety of residence halls, apartments, and houses, and all new, single undergraduate students under the age of 25 who meet deadlines are guaranteed on-campus housing in the fall. Assistance in locating off-campus housing also is provided. The Associated Students of UCI sponsor a variety of special events on campus. The Anteater Recreation Center, a new state-of-the-art sports and fitness facility, is open to all registered UCI students.

Disability Services: Disability Services offers disabled students opportunities to participate in the academic community at UCI. Students with varying disabilities including those who use wheelchairs, semi-ambulatory, blind or visually impaired, deaf or hard of hearing, learning disabled, or who have chronic health problems may be eligible for reasonable disability accommodations through this program. UC Los Angeles has a reputation for the excellence of its academic programs and the achievements of its students and faculty. Consistently ranked among the top half dozen research universities in the United States, it is the only campus among the nation's top 10 research universities that was established in the twentieth century. It maintains 80 departments of instruction in 11 professional schools and the College of Letters and Science. The campus' extensive research program - with 5,000 funded projects in progress at any given time - as well as its renowned Center for the Health Sciences and myriad arts offerings make UCLA a major educational and cultural center and an important community resource.

UC Merced is the first new UC campus in 40 years, opening in Fall 2005 with three schools: Engineering; Natural Sciences; and Social Sciences, Humanities and Arts. Degree offerings include bioengineering; biological sciences; chemical sciences; computer science and engineering; earth systems science; environmental engineering; human biology; management; material sciences and engineering; applied mathematical sciences; mechanical engineering; physics; social and cognitive sciences; and world cultures and history. Graduate degree programs include applied mathematics; computer and information systems; environmental systems; atomic and molecular science and engineering; quantitative and systems biology; social and cognitive sciences; and world cultures. Sixty full-time faculty members form the core faculty, while the university employs approximately 550 additional faculty members and other professionals.

Building design and construction emphasize the most advanced techniques in energy and resource conservation and employ cutting-edge "green" building practices that reflect the university's commitment to environment sustainability. As part of this practice, the university has set aside 25,000 acres of grassland habitat for permanent conservation.

Special institutes include the Sierra Nevada Research Institute. Also planned are the World Cultures Institute, Energy Institute and Systems Biology Institute.

Disability Services: The University of California, Merced, is committed to ensuring equal educational opportunities for students with disabilities. An integral part of this commitment is the coordination of specialized academic support services through the Disability Services Center (DSC). The philosophy of the DSC is to promote independence and participation in campus life for students with disabilities. The DSC staff is available to answer questions that prospective students may have about services for students with disabilities. For more information: (209) 381-7884

Located in the Inland Empire, UC Riverside expects enrollment growth well into the twenty-first century. Among the opportunities available to students are the accelerated Biomedical Sciences program, unique in UC; the new College of Engineering; and a B.S. in Business Administration, one of only two such programs in the University system. Special resources include the California Museum of Photography, the J. Lloyd Eaton Collection of Science Fiction, the Rupert Costo Library of the American Indian, the Center for Ideas and Society, and the Water Resources Center.

Disability Services: Support services have been available at UC Riverside since the mid-1960s, making our campus one of the first in the nation to provide services for students with disabilities. Efforts were made to make the campus wheelchair accessible; services soon expanded to address the needs of students with other disabilities. Today, the staff provide services to a wide range of undergraduate and graduate students. For more information: (909) 787-3862

UC San Diego is now one of the nation's leading research universities, with a faculty that includes six Nobel laureates and ranks fifth among U.S. universities in federal research expenditures. The campus offers undergraduate and graduate programs spanning all academic disciplines, including recently established graduate schools of Architecture and International Relations/Pacific Studies. Among public universities, it has a high percentage of undergraduates who go on to medical and graduate schools. A high number of its undergraduates study abroad.

Disability Services: Our mission is to facilitate and encourage students with disabilities to achieve and maintain independence, academic and social success, and to become strong, self-advocates (on and off campus) through the coordination of access to programs, services, and facilities. OSD promotes effective planning, adaptation, and enhanced awareness of students' individual lives. For more information: (858) 534-6308

UC Santa Barbara is a pioneer in interdisciplinary research. Its eight national centers - including the world-renowned Institute for Theoretical Physics, the National Center for Geographic Information and Analysis, the Center for Quantized
Electronic Structures, and the Materials Research Laboratory - are all designed to foster collaboration among scholars from different disciplines. The campus is also an innovator in both research and teaching. It offers the master of music/doctor of musical arts degrees (both are performance degrees) and advanced degrees in religious studies. It is home to the unique College of Creative Studies, which enrolls students for advanced, independent work, and the Donald Bren School of Environmental Science and Management, which offers both masters and doctoral degree programs. With the establishment of the Global and International Studies Program, interdisciplinary global perspectives are researched and developed at the university.

Established in 1878

Hastings College of the Law, the law department of the University of California in San Francisco, is the oldest as well as the largest law school in the West. It seeks not only to prepare students for entry into the legal profession, but also to provide the profession with responsible men and women who meet the needs of society for legal service and the administration of justice.

Applicants must have earned a bachelor's degree from a college or university of approved standing. Students are admitted on the basis of academic achievement, potential for law study, and potential for achievement in and contribution to the field of law, as measured by undergraduate grades, performance on the Law School Admission Test, and evidence of skills, abilities, and other characteristics.

Hastings operates 248 student apartments in a high-rise building one block from the campus and maintains a Housing Office that lists off-campus housing.

It is governed by an 11-member Board of Directors separate from the Regents of the University, but it awards its degrees as the San Francisco law school of the University.

Disability Services: Hastings College of the Law recognizes its obligation to provide overall program accessibility for qualified persons with disabilities. The College provides reasonable accommodations necessary to afford equal access, opportunity and full participation in all college programs for qualified students with professionally verified disabilities. The Naval Postgraduate School is an academic institution whose emphasis is on study and research programs relevant to the Navy's interests, as well as to the interests of other arms of the Department of Defense. The programs are designed to accommodate the unique requirements of the military.

Located in Monterey, California, on the Pacific Ocean 120 miles south of San Francisco, the Naval Postgraduate School campus covers 627 acres of land. The site, which has been home to NPS since 1951, houses state-of-the-art laboratories, numerous academic buildings, a library, government housing and impressive recreational facilities.

Nearly 1,400 students attend in residence, and another 150 in off campus degree programs. The student body consists of U.S. officers from all branches of the uniformed services, officers from approximately 45 other countries, and a small number of civilians. Selections of officers for fully funded graduate educations is based upon outstanding professional performance as an officer, potential, and a strong academic background.

The faculty, the majority of whom are civilians, are drawn from a broad diversity of educational institutions and represent a prestigious collection of scholars. Faculty/student interaction is high. Every class is taught directly by a faculty member, most of whom have a Ph.D.

WASC-Accredited Independent Institutions

In addition to the three public systems of higher education, California is also home to 130 independent colleges and universities that are accredited by the Western Association of Schools and Colleges (WASC).

The majority of the independent colleges and universities are non-profit educational institutions that receive no direct public funding. They cover the full range of higher education offerings, serve some 260,000 California students each year, and have very different characteristics.

They include large campuses that are recognized worldwide for their traditional undergraduate, graduate, and professional degree programs and smaller institutions that focus on a limited course of study or profession. Some offer associate (2-year) degrees in specialized majors for specific vocations. Some have a religious affiliation. Some institutions mainly serve commuters and others are residential campuses.

Most WASC-accredited independent institutions are four-year colleges and universities accredited by the WASC Commission for Senior Colleges and Universities. Only twenty-one campuses are accredited by the WASC Commission for Community and Junior Colleges.

Accreditation

Accreditation certifies that an institution meets or exceeds established standards and is achieving its own stated objectives. WASC and the other five regional associations in the United States grant “institutional accreditation” after a comprehensive self-study followed by an on-site evaluation of the programs and services of the total institution.

This means that all diploma or degree programs and educational activities offered by the institution are covered by the institution’s accreditation. The evaluation determines whether or not the institution qualifies for regional recognition, but more importantly, periodic self-study and review promote improvement in educational quality.

If you have questions about the status of any WASC accredited college, contact either:

Note: The source of the information on accreditation was the Western Association of Schools and Colleges.

Admission requirements, deadlines

Many of the independent institutions have admission requirements that are similar to the California State University or University of California systems. Students can enter directly from high school or can transfer from a community college.

Some independent institutions have requirements related to a specialty area of study such as music, art, or technology. However, requirements and deadlines for admission vary and you should contact each campus.

Fees and tuition, costs of living, housing

Fees and tuition at independent institutions are generally higher than public universities, but vary depending on the course of study and other factors. Many independent colleges and universities offer housing for students. Check with each institution for specific details.

Association of Independent California Colleges and Universities (AICCU)

Seventy-six non-profit, degree granting colleges and universities accredited by WASC form the Association of Independent California Colleges and Universities (AICCU). Among many other activities, AICCU publishes a Guide for Students, Parents, and Counselors about its member institutions and distributes a brochure — A Closer Look — that briefly describes them. California Institute of the Arts (Cal Arts) was the first fully accredited, degree-granting institution of higher learning in the United States created specifically for students in the visual and performing arts. Its 60-acre campus in Valencia, 30 miles north of Hollywood, offers a variety of undergraduate and graduate programs in art and design, dance, film and video, music, and theatre. Students work closely with a distinguished full-time and part-time faculty of 248 professional artists and are mentored individually. Each year, more than 100 visiting artists from around the world complement the work of the permanent faculty.

Disability Services: Cal Arts has made all necessary adjustments and accommodations to enable individuals with disabilities to participate fully in all of the programs and activities. California Lutheran University provides students with a rigorous intellectual experience centered in the liberal arts. Classes are small, and opportunities for off-campus study and co-curricular involvement are significant. The university uses the latest technology and curriculum innovations and has received recognition for its unique approach to a cross-disciplinary writing program. From residence hall rooms and computer labs, a new campus-wide computer network offers students access to a variety of application software, E-mail, and 1,776,000 Internet sites. KCLU-FM - a National Public Radio affiliate based at the university - serves as a resource for students interested in communication and broadcasting.

Disability Services: CLU will make reasonable efforts to accommodate students with special needs, and make it possible for them to participate in University programs.

Applicants with special needs should discuss their needs for accommodation with the director of the Learning Resources Center.

Pepperdine University is a Christian institution consisting of Seaver College and four graduate schools. Its most distinctive features are a serious commitment to rigorous academics and emphasis on Judeo-Christian values. Pepperdine students learn from both academic instruction and life-experience learning opportunities like international programs in Australia, England, France, Germany, Honduras, Italy, Japan, and Spain. Approximately 65 percent of Pepperdine's undergraduates receive financial assistance through scholarships, grants, loans, and work-study programs. Its main campus is in Malibu with additional centers in Culver City, Encino, Irvine, and Long Beach.

Stanford University is located on the San Francisco Peninsula, 35 miles south of the city of San Francisco. Its founders were former California Governor and Senator Leland Stanford and his wife Jane. It is a private institution, free from religious and political influences; and, by the founders' decree, it is residential and coeducational. From the beginning, it has been an institution where research takes equal place with teaching and where the liberal arts are combined with science and technology.

Disability Services: The Disability Resource Center coordinates services and resources for Stanford undergraduate and graduate students with documented disabilities. The University of the Pacific's main campus is in Stockton, approximately 80 miles east of San Francisco in the San Joaquin Valley.
It is considered a comprehensive university by virtue of the range of its offerings.

Undergraduates and graduates at Pacific receive the kind of personalized attention most often experienced at the graduate school level. Two other campuses are McGeorge School of Law in Sacramento and School of Dentistry in San Francisco.
Nine of UOP's schools and colleges are located on the Stockton campus.

Disability Services: A variety of academic related services are available to students at the University of the Pacific with documented physical disabilities that substantially limit one or more of the major life activities. Students with temporary disabilities may also request services through the Disabled Student Services program. For more information: (209) 946-

State Approved and Exempt Institutions

Private postsecondary schools, colleges, and universities are approved by the State with oversight authority vested in the Department of Consumer Affairs, Bureau for Private Postsecondary and Vocational Education (BPPVE).

Listed in this section are 236 state approved degree-granting institutions offering a variety of academic programs. Some institutions are exempt from the regular state approval process and are also listed in this section. To qualify for an exemption there are requirements that must be met as listed in the California Education Code, Title 3, Division 10, Part 59, Chapter 7, Private Postsecondary and Vocational Institutions.

Generally, institutions that are exempt from state approval are exempt for the following reasons:

- The institution is accredited by a national accrediting agency such as the American Bar Association (ABA).
- The institution is accredited by a regional accrediting agency such as the Western Association of Schools and Colleges (WASC).
- The institution teaches religion and meets all the requirements for a religious exemption.

The BPPVE also approves approximately 2,400 non-degree granting vocational schools and programs leading to licensing.

For additional information about state approved institutions, exemptions, or vocational school licensing requirements, contact the BPPVE or access their website:

CALIFORNIA POSTSECONDARY EDUCATION COMMISSION

THE California Postsecondary Education Commission is a citizen board established in 1974 by the Legislature and the Office of the Governor to coordinate the efforts of California's colleges and universities and to provide independent, non-partisan policy analysis and recommendations on higher education issues.

Members of the Commission

Of the 16 Commission members, nine represent the general public, with three each appointed for six-year terms by the Office of the Governor, the Senate Rules Committee, and the Speaker of the Assembly. Five others represent the major systems of postsecondary education in California. Two student members are appointed by the Office of the Governor

Functions of the Commission

The Commission is charged by the Legislature and the Office of the Governor to "assure the effective utilization of public postsecondary education resources, thereby eliminating waste and unnecessary duplication, and to promote diversity, innovation, and responsiveness to student and societal needs."

To this end, the Commission conducts independent reviews of matters affecting the 2,600 institutions of postsecondary education in California, including community colleges, four-year colleges and universities, and professional and occupational schools.

As an advisory body to the Legislature and the Office of the Governor, the Commission performs specific duties of planning, evaluation, and coordination by cooperating with other State agencies and non-governmental groups that perform governing, administrative, and assessment functions. The Commission does not govern or administer any institutions, nor does it approve, authorize, or accredit any colleges and universities.

Operation of the Commission

The Commission holds regular public meetings throughout the year at which it discusses and takes action on studies and takes positions on proposed legislation affecting education beyond the high school level in California. Requests to speak at a meeting may be made by writing the Commission in advance or by submitting a request before the start of the meeting.

The Commission's day-to-day work is carried out by its staff in Sacramento, under the guidance of an Executive Director who is appointed by the Commission.

Further information about the Commission and its publications may be obtained from the Commission offices at 770 L Street, Suite 1160, Sacramento, California 98514-3396; telephone (916) 445-1000; web site www.cpec.ca.gov.
