Policy on public reporting of TEQSA's decisions

February 2015

Purpose

This policy outlines TEQSA's approach to publicly reporting its regulatory decisions. It should be read in conjunction with TEQSA's Public Disclosure Policy, available at:

<http://teqsa.gov.au/sites/default/files/TEQSAPublicDisclosurePolicy.pdf>.

Background

TEQSA has published reports on all its regulatory decisions made since 1 July 2013, irrespective of the provider category in which a provider is registered or the particular circumstances of a provider, with the exception of decisions relating to an application for initial registration from an aspiring provider. Any reports on renewal of registration decisions prior to 1 July 2013 have been published with the agreement of the relevant provider.

These reports provide prospective students, current students and the wider public access to information about providers and the sector and provide transparency of TEQSA's processes, regulatory decisions and reasons for these decisions.

Reports are included on the National Register of Higher Education Providers ('the Register') to promulgate information to the public about registered providers. The Register is at: <http://www.teqsa.gov.au/national-register> and is the authoritative source of information on the status of registered higher education providers in Australia.

Policy principles

The extent of information that is reported publicly, and how this information is reported, is guided by TEQSA's objects (as set out in Section 3 of the TEQSA Act) and basic principles of regulation (as set out in Section 13 of the TEQSA Act). The basic principles are: reflecting risk, regulatory necessity and proportionate regulation.

Other factors guiding TEQSA's approach to public reporting are:

1. The balance between:
 - a. public, provider and stakeholder interests, and the protection of these interests from the perspective of current and prospective students;
 - b. transparency and integrity of TEQSA's processes; and
 - c. legitimate privacy and confidentiality concerns of regulated entities.
2. How reporting will help meet the objectives of the TEQSA Act, including:
 - a. enhancing the reputation and competitiveness of Australian higher education
 - b. ensuring that students undertaking, or proposing to undertake, higher education have access to information about providers and the sector (taking into account information already available from other sources such as the MyUniversity and provider websites); and
 - c. protecting and enhancing excellence, diversity and innovation in higher education.
3. The need for TEQSA to be consistent in its approach to reporting across providers, irrespective of the provider category in which a provider is registered or the particular circumstances of a provider.
4. The need for TEQSA to avoid the publication of information that may unnecessarily prejudice a provider's ability to operate in the higher education sector, balanced against the interests of students.

5. The information already contained in the National Register, and the benefits of adding or linking any additional reporting to the National Register.
6. The need to maintain confidentiality to effectively investigate an issue, and whether any public comment might prejudice TEQSA's ability to investigate a matter or the right of a person or body to a fair hearing.
7. The need to afford procedural fairness where appropriate. TEQSA allows a provider a reasonable opportunity to comment on the proposed text to be included in a public report for an adverse decision, and by taking account of a provider's response in determining whether to publish a report and the content of the report.
8. The need to ensure that timing of publication of decisions does not prejudice relevant legal review processes. Accordingly, TEQSA will not publish, apart from in exceptional circumstances, a public report on the National Register until the period for applying for review of the decision that is the subject of a report has expired, or in cases where a review application is made, until the review is completed. TEQSA will consider whether exceptional circumstances exist having regard to the three regulatory principles, and to the principles in TEQSA's Public Disclosure Policy.
9. Information published will relate to the outcomes of an assessment about a provider's compliance with the Threshold Standards, including risks of future non-compliance.
10. In addition to a public report, details of decisions will be published on the National Register consistent with the Register Guidelines. Decisions that will be published on the Register include decisions about accreditation or registration as well as whether conditions have been imposed. In such cases, all conditions will be listed in the relevant public report. Where a decision is reviewable, TEQSA will not include the details of the decision on the National Register until after the period for applying for review has expired, or after the review is completed (see also point 8).
11. Reporting practices will be regularly monitored, evaluated and revised to maintain currency and good practice, in line with TEQSA's commitment to continuous improvement generally.

Report formats

Each public report includes the following information:

- a. provider name
- b. relevant legislative provisions relating to the decision or decisions being reported
- c. decision reached and main reasons for the decision (including, as applicable, period of registration, provider category, period of accreditation, and any conditions imposed)
- d. observations (as applicable, a summary of any concerns that TEQSA may have regarding the provider's ability to continue to meet the Threshold Standards into the future).
- e. Links to relevant information including relevant objects of the TEQSA Acts, information about TEQSA's role, the TEQSA Act and the Threshold Standards,

Timeframes for publication

TEQSA will replace public reports relating to registration or accreditation decisions from the TEQSA website with updated reports to ensure that the National Register contains only public reports that reflect current regulatory decisions. Previous reports will be archived by TEQSA to form part of each provider's regulatory history, but will not appear on the Register or be made public.

Reference to conditions are removed from the National Register when TEQSA has satisfactory evidence that such conditions have been met in full by a provider and/or TEQSA has revoked the condition(s).
