

National- and State-Level High School Graduation Rates for English Learners

FACT

In SY 2013–14, the national graduation rate reached a record high of 82.3 percent for all public high school students, an increase of one percentage point from the previous school year.

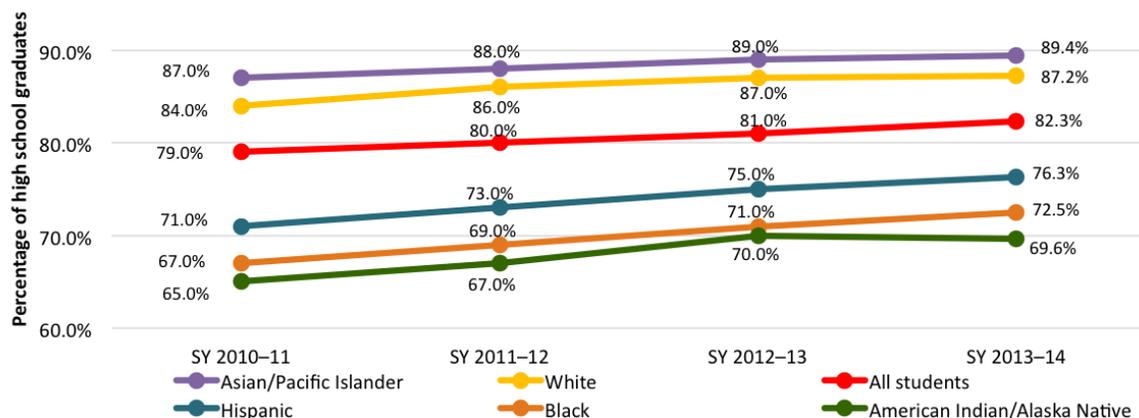

Between SYs 2010–11 and 2013–14, graduation rates increased for all racial/ethnic categories. Asian/Pacific Islander and White students consistently graduated at higher rates than the national average for all students. The gaps between the 'all student' rates and 'Black' and 'Hispanic' student rates decreased by approximately two percentage points each since SY 2010–11.
