Shiseido, the world's fifth largest cosmetics manufacturer, created an eco-policy to encourage environmentally-conscious practices across all aspects of their business, from recycling to energy-efficient buildings to eco-friendly product packaging. To meet their business philosophy Shiseido installed photovoltaic (PV) solar roof system at their new East Windsor Manufacturing Plant in 2007. The expected combined annual energy cost savings will exceed 60% of Shiseido's pre-project electricity costs. The project is the largest single-roof solar system in New Jersey.
